

My name is Kristin Streich, and after working as a classroom teacher, I received a specialist degree in school psychology from the University of Houston Clear Lake. Since then, I have been a practicing LSSP in the Houston area working with students ranging from early childhood to high school age. As of this fall, I have returned to school as a doctoral student at the University of Houston Clear Lake where I assist with teaching and conducting research for publication. Areas in which I have particular interest are assessment, and ADHD/executive functioning. In addition to my studies, I currently conduct trainings across the state for teachers, administrators, and assessment personnel on various topics related to our field.

I know that I would serve you well as your student representative for TASP as I have the unique perspective of knowing what the demands are for students in our field, as well as knowing what it takes to perform well as a practicing LSSP. I ask for your vote, and thank you for your time!
